

A DEMOCRATIC DAY

St. Louis, Mo., July 4.—An even thousand delegates will assemble in the Coliseum next Wednesday to name a candidate to run as the democratic party's choice for president of the United States. These delegates represent fifty-three political divisions—forty-five states, four territories, Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. The number of delegates, exclusive of the territories and insular possessions is twice the number of United States senators and members of the house of representatives. There is no doubt that the national committee will decide that the six delegates from Porto Rico are entitled to seats in the convention.

Each delegate to the national convention represents a section of the country populated by approximately 80,000 people, of whom at least 16,000 are made adults of the voting age. So the whole convention represents the democratic party of approximately 16,000,000 voters, or 80,000,000 people.

The 1,600 delegates meet to pick out a man who will represent the ideas of the democratic voters as to necessary qualifications for a president of the United States, and to voice their ideas as to general policies which should be followed by the chief executive for the four years succeeding March 4, 1905. The delegates will voice these policies in a series of resolutions, which, taken together, is popularly called a "platform." They are also to choose a candidate for vice president to serve in case of the death or inability of the president.

While the greatest uncertainty exists as to the action of the convention in regard to the selection of candidates and the adoption of resolutions, the proceedings will adhere closely to the routine and definite program always followed by the national political gatherings. The convention will be in session three days.

The delegates will assemble in the Coliseum at noon on Wednesday. They will be called to order by ex-Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, chairman of the national committee. Secretary C. A. Walsh will then read the official call for the convention. Senator Jones will make a brief address, presenting to the convention John Shary Williams, of Mississippi, who will be introduced as temporary chairman.

The choice of Representative Williams for temporary chairman is made at the suggestion of prominent democrats of all factions. Though he comes to the convention as an instructed Parker delegate, the Bryan and Hearst element offered no objection to his selection. Mr. Williams' chief duty as temporary chairman will be to deliver a speech which will voice the general party policies, and will be what is popularly termed a "key-note" speech.

After the presentation of the secretary and other convention officers, the chairman will call upon the different state delegations and ask each to send to the platform the selections made by the delegation for membership on the committee on resolutions, credentials, and permanent organization and order of business. In the meantime each delegation will have met and made its selection for these places, and the names will be sent up. When these names have been furnished to the presiding officer the latter will have before him the membership of the various committees, and after announcing them will direct that the committee on credentials, resolutions, and order of business retire and proceed to the business for which they were chosen to perform. The committees will go to work, and, if necessary, will labor all night so as to be able to report to the convention when it meets the following day.

Having accomplished this much, the convention will adjourn and wait for the various reports from the committees. This will end the first day's session of the convention.

William J. Bryan, who is here as a member of the Nebraska delegation, is understood to desire the chairmanship of the resolutions, or platform committee. His selection will naturally be combated vigorously by the "conservatives," who are mostly supporters of Judge Parker. The platform committee will have a difficult task on its hands to satisfy the opposing elements and draw up resolutions that will be acceptable to a majority of the delegates. The platform will discuss trusts, labor, immigration, statehood and other subjects.

There are numerous contests to engage the attention of the credentials committee, among the most important being the cases from Illinois and the district of Columbia. The recommendations of the national committee, which has been considering the contests for several days, will govern in most of these cases brought before the credentials committee. The committee on order of business prescribes the rules and order of business which will govern the convention, and names the permanent officers who will have charge of the convention's deliberations.

Senator Bailey, of Texas, Thomas Callaway of Michigan, Patrick A. Collins of Boston, and James Hamilton Lewis of Washington, are among those mentioned for permanent chairmen. John W. Martin will be sergeant-at-arms, and C. J. Gavin of New Mexico, will be reading clerk.

Thursday the convention will be called to order by the temporary chairman, who will receive the reports from the committee on credentials, and permanent organization, and order of business, and these reports having been adopted, a committee will be named to escort to the chair the permanent chairman. The latter will then deliver a speech similar in character to that of the temporary chairman, dealing with the issues of the campaign. This speech will later form an important part of the campaign literature, and be published in the official party publication known as the "campaign text book."

Following the address of the permanent chairman, will come the report of the committee that has framed the platform. At this stage of the proceedings the convention will listen up and many interesting speeches and debates may be looked for. These speeches will probably prolong the session, though the final adoption of the platform will mark the end of the second day of the convention.

Friday will be the big day of the convention, the day to which all the previous sessions and proceedings are but an introduction. It will be the day on which candidates for president and vice president will be named. The candidates will be placed in nomination, but few believe that the convention will be able to make a selection before Saturday or probably later. This is the part of the game when heated debates and fiery oratory are in order.

The roll of states will be called alphabetically, and each state will be asked if it has a candidate to present. Arizona or California might present the name of Hearst, but it is probable that no response will be made until Delaware is reached, when the leader of the delegation from that state will present the name of Judge George Gray for the presidential nomination. It is probable that Illinois, with its 54 delegates, will be selected to present the name of Hearst. Massachusetts will present the name of Richard Olney. When New York is reached the name of Parker will be formally presented to the convention. The speech nominating Judge Parker will be made by Martin W. Littleton, president of the Borough of Brooklyn. Missouri will cast the candidacy of her favorite son, Cockrell, upon the turbulent waters, and Wisconsin will place in nomination Wall, of Milwaukee, whose candidacy succeeded in preventing the Badger state from falling into the Hearst column. The German candidate will be presented by West Virginia, which is the only state instructed for the Maryland Senator, though this fact is not by any means vindictive of his real strength in the race.

After the favorite sons have been presented and the first ballot taken the battle will be on in earnest. When the end will come or what it will be is purely conjecture. When a candidate has been finally selected, however, the convention will proceed to the nomination of a candidate for vice president. So far little attention is being paid to this part of the work. It is virtually an established rule to select a candidate from some place on the ticket from a section of the country geographically opposite that from which the presidential candidate comes.

With the selection of the ticket the national convention will adjourn. The national committee, however, will remain in the city to choose a chairman, who will be the manager of the campaign; a vice chairman, and a secretary, who will be his assistants, and an executive committee, who will act with him in an advisory capacity. The selection of a chairman will depend upon which wing of the party gains control of the convention. The chairman will naturally be one who is personally acceptable to the presidential nominee. In any event, it is stated definitely that ex-Senator Jones, the incumbent, will retire, and a new man chosen for the place. Should Parker be nominated it is rumored that Thomas Tammart, the present national committeeman from Indiana, and a practical politician of recognized ability, will be selected to head the committee.

After the new committee is made up the chairman and his assistants will proceed to open headquarters for the campaign. Headquarters will be maintained in New York, and the western end of the campaign will probably be directed from Chicago as in former years. Several weeks after the convention adjourns the committee on notification will wait on the presidential and vice presidential candidates to formally notify them of their selection.

A RETRACTION

From the July number Ladies' Home Journal.

In the May number of the Ladies' Home Journal, we published, in the article entitled, "The Patent-Medicine Curse," an analysis of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, in which that preparation was represented as containing, among other ingredients, tincture of digitalis, tincture of opium, and alcohol. Immediately upon publication of the number a suit for damages was instituted by the R. V. Pierce Medical company, of Buffalo, New York, proprietors of the preparation in question, against The Curtis Publishing company, based upon the claim that none of the three ingredients was contained in the medicine.

Upon the filing of the suit, we, of course, immediately looked into the published analysis. It appears that this particular analysis had been made, if at all, fully twenty-five years ago. We, thereupon, employed three leading chemists in three different cities to make an analysis of the preparation from bottles bought in the open market. The analyses, one and all, now show to us conclusively that not a single one of the ingredients mentioned by us in the analysis quoted—that is, either digitalis, opium or alcohol—was contained in the bottles analyzed. We then—the president of this company and the printer—personally visited the R. V. Pierce Medical company, at Buffalo, and were there convinced that the officers of the company were absolutely truthful in their claim that not one of these ingredients was contained in "Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription." Naturally, since the analysis we printed has been proved erroneous, the deductions made in connection with this preparation were unwarranted and unfounded.

Under these circumstances it is now perfectly plain to us that this magazine was unintentionally, but nevertheless absolutely misled in making the original statement, and we hereby, of our own volition, make this unqualified acknowledgment of our mistake to The R. V. Pierce Medical company and to our readers.

The mistake was honestly made, but it was a mistake.

A PRACTICAL BULLETIN ON STOCK FEEDING

Few people realize how extensive the stock-raising industry has become in New Mexico. According to the 12th United States census there were 1,054,922 cattle, 54,192 horses, and 1,235,922 sheep in New Mexico in 1900 valued, at $31,727,400.00. This increase in value of the live-stock in the territory during the ten years from 1890 to 1900, was a little over six and one-half millions of dollars.

The stock-raising industry is the source of no inconsiderable portion of the income of the people of the territory. The industry is surrounded by conditions peculiar to those of the arid west. Most of the live stock must find a market wholly outside of our borders. Not infrequently a light rainfall on the ranges farther north, or influences cause fluctuations in prices in the large markets. These conditions naturally react upon the industry within the territory since all who handle range grown stock are affected by depression in prices.

Any means that will tend to counteract adverse influences will be for the interest and advancement of the industry. Feeding is resorted to in some parts of the territory, in fact, not a few ranchmen feed out their range stock upon the valley ranches. Should feeding become general, even to the extent of supplying the home demands, fewer animals would have to be exported, less meat imported and less alfalfa sold in the form of hay.

In order to throw some light upon the question of feeding in New Mexico a series of experiments have been inaugurated by the Territorial Agricultural Experiment Station. The results thus far obtained from the investigations made have just been published in Bulletin No. 50, entitled "Steer and Lamb Feeding." A set of photographs and tables are included in the bulletin.

In these experiments it was found that when the price of alfalfa dropped below $9.00 per ton baled, it could be profitably fed to steers from the stack, and when it dropped below $10.00 per ton baled, it could be profitably fed to lambs from the stack. One lot of steers returned $12.81 per ton for the alfalfa hay consumed, and one lot of lambs returned $13.28 per ton for the alfalfa hay consumed. The alfalfa hay consumed were fed all of the cracked corn they would eat. This corn cost $1.274 per 100 pounds.

In this brief article space will not allow a full discussion of the results, but those who are interested in feeding can secure a copy of Bulletin No. 50 by writing to the Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, at Mesilla Park.

FIRST GAME

THE ALBUQUERQUE BROWNS DEFEATED SATURDAY AFTERNOON AT EL PASO.

From the El Paso Times.

Though the score of 11 to 9 would not indicate it, the game Saturday afternoon between the El Paso Colts and Albuquerque was one of the prettiest contests of the season.

The game started off well, not a man crossing the plate until the fourth inning, when two runs were made by the Colts, but after that they registered at least one each inning with the exception of the ninth.

The visitors played a good game, but were unfortunate in not being able to bunch the few hits they scratched out. The Colts, on the other hand, frequently connected with the elusive sphere, and managed to swing it out just at the time when a good hit was needed. Though the result was never in doubt after the seventh, when the Colts piled up four more runs to their credit, the crowd thoroughly enjoyed the game, and hardly a man left the park until the last out had been made and the game had been declared El Paso's by a score of 11 to 9. The visitors could not realize that they had been shut out, and it is safe to say that their respect for the El Paso players has increased an hundredfold.

The score by innings follows:

Victorious Yesterday.

Sunday afternoon the tables were turned, and the Albuquerque Browns, with Gallegos in the box and McDonald receiving, won by the close score of 3 to 2. The game abounded in sensational plays throughout, and the errors were few. The result of the game was as follows:

Base Ball Players and Foot Racers.

Louis J. Kruger, ex-champion long distance foot racer of Germany, and Holland, writes, Oct. 27th, 1901: "During my training of eight weeks' foot races at Salt Lake City, in April last, I used Ballard's Snow Liniment to my greatest satisfaction. Therefore, I highly recommend Snow Liniment to all who are troubled with sprains, bruises or rheumatism." 25c, 50c, $1.00 a bottle. Sold by J. H. O'Reilly & Co.

Did you tackle the troubles that came your way?

With a resolute heart and cheerful? Or hide your face from the light of day?

With a craven soul and fearful? Or a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's a nuisance?

Or a trouble is what you make it. And it isn't the fact that you're hurt. But only how did you take it.

You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?

Come up with a smiling face. It's nothing against you to fall down flat.

But to lie there that's disgrace. The harder you're thrown why, the higher you bounce;

Be proud of your blackened eye! It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts;

It's how did you fight—and why?

And though you be done to the death, what then?

If you battled the best you could, If you played your part in the world of men,

Why, the Critic will call it good. Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce,

And whether he's slow or spry, It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts.

But only how did you die?

The Game Albuquerque Won

AT EL PASO RESULTED IN THE CLOSE SCORE OF 3 TO 2.

From the Times.

The second game of the present series between Albuquerque and the El Paso Colts was played at Washington park yesterday afternoon before a large crowd, and resulted in a victory for the visitors by the close score of 3 to 2.

The game was an interesting one from every point of view, and the enthusiasm of the spectators was evidenced in almost every inning, and whenever a good play of any kind was made.

It was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, and though Sprites received better support than did Gallegos, the latter kept his hits well scattered, and virtually won his own game.

The Albuquerque boys made two runs the first inning, and though the Colts played with a determination to win, they were never able to get ahead.

There were many good plays on both sides, and several long hits were made. Andrews knocked out a pretty three-bagger, and Ford and Meyers each had a two-base hit to their credit.

McDonald, the catcher for the Albuquerque team, caught a magnificent game.

The most critical stage of the game was in the ninth, when the Browns were retired without a score, and the Colts succeeded in getting three men on bases, with two men out. The interest of the spectators was intense when Ford stepped to the bat, and a little hit would have tied it, not won the game. Amid almost breathless silence Ford made three futile swings, at the elusive sphere and the game was over.

An accident that fortunately did not result seriously occurred at the residence of Dr. Roger Thursday evening, says the Alamogordo Journal. Mrs. Roger was busy in the kitchen and started to set a large glass lamp which was on a table to another place and just as she lifted it, from no apparent reason the bowl fell off the door facing was also scorched in throwing the burning lamp out. The affair was very fortunate in that it did not set afire to Mrs. Roger's clothes or scatter the flames over the room.

J. A. Skinner, dealer in staple and fancy groceries, 216 West Railroad avenue, says: "When a man finds from observation and experience that an article extensively advertised does not do as it promises it is his duty to prevent his fellow men from squandering probably hard earned wealth in its purchase. It is just as much the duty of a citizen to fail his friends and acquaintances about articles upon which they can absolutely depend. Some time ago there came to my notice a case of a child whose control over the kidney secretions was limited. The parents procured for it Doan's Kidney Pills at the Alvarado pharmacy, and the treatment, according to directions for children, was commenced. In addition to the limited control there was considerable backache, the complications fully proving that in some way the kidneys were either weakened or over excited. The treatment of Doan's Kidney Pills so strengthened, washed and purified the kidneys that the annoyance ceased."

LIFE AMONG CLIFF DWELLERS

QUAINT CUSTOMS OF ANCIENT ABORIGINAL RACE ARE TYPEFIED AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Famous caves of the Stone Age, as they exist today in the canyons of Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado, are reproduced for the habitation of real Cliff Dwellers on The Pike at the World's fair, and here the life of these ancient aborigines may be studied amid natural surroundings.

Added ethnological interest is found in a large pueblo of Zuni and Moki Indians, who daily perform the historic snake dance and follow the strange customs common to their tribes. The Indians are the descendants of ancient kings and are the remnants of a once powerful race. They have not been seen heretofore at any exposition.

Huge cliffs form the front of the canyon, and above these can be seen a towering peak which can be reached by a tortuous trail over hanging rocky ledges, deep fissures and cavernous Burros convey the visitors to the top of the crags where the caves and their relics may be seen and where a fine view is obtained of the busy scenes of The Pike below.

Entrance to the city of Cliff Dwellers is through a tunnel which pierces the cliffs. The reverse side of the walls presents more caves and other mountain trails. A large structure of quaint architecture occupies the center of the village, and in this the Indians perform the dance of Kachina, the poetic flute dance and the dramatic snake dance.

The Kachina is distinguished by the use of the
